

I'm not robot

Continue

Allyn and bacon guide to writing 8th edition

This print manual is available for students to rent for their classes. The Pearson Print Rental Program provides students with affordable access to learning materials so they come to class ready to succeed. For writing classes. Grounded in current theory and research, but practical and teachable. Allyn and Bacon's Writing Guide takes a distinctive pedagogical approach that integrates compositional research with rhetorical theory and writing ideas throughout the curriculum. He treats writing and reading both as rhetorical acts and as processes of problem-setting, investigation, critical thinking, analysis and argumentation. Its purpose is to evoke the type of deep learning that allows students to transfer compositional and rhetorical skills across disciplines and professional fields. Teachers and students appreciate its clear and consistent explanations, engaging classroom activities and flexible sequence of goal-based writing assignments that help authors produce effective, thought-rich essays in the academic and civic genres. Numerous examples of student and professional writing accompany this comprehensive guide to the concepts and skills needed for writing, research and publishing in college and beyond. Part 1. Rhetoric for writers1. Problems: The demands of writing, reading and critical thinking2. Exploring Problems: Making Claims3. Think critically about rhetorical problems4. How messages persuade5. Think critically about document design, visual rhetoric and multimodal messagesPart 2. Writing Projects6. Rhetoric reading: The writer as a strong reader7. Writing an autobiographical account8. Writing an exploratory essay or annotated bibliography9. Writing an essay or informative (and surprising)10. Images11. analysis. Writing an essay on literary analysis12. Writing a scientific research report13. Analysis and synthesis of ideas14. Writing a classic argument15. Make an assessment16. Proposal of a solutionPart 3. Composition and revision guidePart 4. A RhetoriaTorid Guide to ResearchPart 5. Writing for AssessmentPart 6. A guide to the H6 edition. Editing for punctuation and mechanics All the material you need to teach your courses. Discover the educational material The eTextbook reader #1 of the world for students. VitalSource is the leading provider of online textbooks and course materials. More than 15 million users have used our Bookshelf platform over the past year to improve their learning experience and results. With anytime, anywhere access and Integrated tools like highlighters, flashcards, and study groups, it's easy to see why so many students go digital with Library. This print manual is available for students to rent for their classes. The Pearson Print Rental Program provides students with affordable access to learning materials so they come to class ready to succeed. For writing classes. Based on current theory and research, but practical and teachable. Allyn and Bacon's Writing Guide Takes a pedagogical approach that integrates compositional research with rhetorical theory and writing ideas throughout the curriculum. He treats writing and reading both as rhetorical acts and as processes of problem-setting, investigation, critical thinking, analysis and argumentation. Its purpose is to evoke the type of deep learning that allows students to transfer compositional and rhetorical skills across disciplines and professional fields. Teachers and students appreciate its clear and consistent explanations, engaging classroom activities and flexible sequence of goal-based writing assignments that help authors produce effective, thought-rich essays in the academic and civic genres. Numerous examples of student and professional writing accompany this comprehensive guide to the concepts and skills needed for writing, research and publishing in college and beyond. Focus on the transfer of learning in disciplines. Promotes deep learning through four underlying skills: 1. How to pose a problem that engages targeted readers 2. How to summarize the conversation surrounding problem 3. How to produce a thesis that adds something new, stimulating or surprising to conversation 4. How to support the thesis with appropriate forms of reasons and evidence. Classroom assignments guide students through all phases of the reading and writing processes Assignments frequently make use of collaboration and peer review. Writing projects in Parts 1 and 2 stimulate valued critical thinking in college classes. Many For Writing and Discussion exercises facilitate the integration of active learning into a course while deepening students' understanding of concepts. The emphasis on the above question helps students consider academic disciplines as areas of inquiry. Easy navigation through the text. Topics are related to learning outcomes with numbered takeaway points highlighted as concepts or skills that help students gain a global understanding through principles that promote metacognitive thinking and give students control over their own solutions to subject or rhetorical problems. Non-fiction writing appears on a continuum from closed to open forms. Introduces students to the rhetorical concepts of purpose, audience and gender and shows why the rules for good writing depend on the rhetorical context. The text focuses on closed-form writing to get into most academic, civic and professional conversations and on open to communicate ideas and experiences that resist closed form structures and create stylistic surprise and pleasure. Coverage of a wide range of genres and objectives, such as academic, civic and professional genres as well as multimodal, personal and narrative forms. Explains the rhetorical function of each genre and purpose as well as the stylistic characteristics. The range of genres is extended to multimodal texts that combine closed and open prose with visual or sound elements. Detailed explanations of the Prose. Show students why some closed-form strategies stem from the cognitive needs of readers rather than arbitrary rules. Also shows students how open prose can create a pleasant surprise through deliberate disturbances and violations of the conventions of closed-form prose. Research is treated as a learning activity that requires rhetorical reading. The book's rhetorical reading teaching method helps students summarize complex readings and critically analyze and reflect on them. This skill is crucial for summarizing conversations on the subject and for any research project that uses verbal, visual or multimodal texts as primary sources. Teaches students to understand the differences between sources of printing and cyberspace: analyze the rhetorical opportunity, gender, context, audience and perspective angle of view of sources; Assess sources pending the appropriate criteria and negotiate the World Wide Web with confidence. Flexible structure for easy implementation. The modular organization gives instructors flexibility in course design. Numbered concepts and skills are mini-lessons that students can easily navigate and instructors can assign in the order they choose. Instructors can mix and match writing tasks to fit the course's goals. Parts 3 and 4 include modularized lessons that teach students to develop an effective writing process while writing closed, open and multimodal texts. The modularized lessons in Part 4 teach students strategies for conducting academic research in a rhetorical environment. Part 4 reinforces the rhetorical concepts of Part 1 and fits well with Chapter 6's emphasis on summary drafting and strong responses to readings. Part 5 teaches students to write essays and write in reflection to promote self-assessment, metacognition and deep learning. Fully covers the results objectives of the Board of Writing Program Administrators (PLA). This correlation appears on the book's interior back covers and in the Instructor Resource Manual to help instructors plan their courses and prepare student evaluations. Revised! Part 1 is reorganized. It also incorporates recent research on learning transfer, threshold concepts and metacognition to help learners apply comprehensive concepts to new rhetorical situations. New! Chapter 1 Posing Problems: The Requirements of Writing, Reading and Critical Thinking in Colleges provides students with an overview. It shows the threshold concepts of problem-setting, knowledge-taking and rhetorical reading promote deep learning, which facilitates the transfer of skills from first-year composition to study students from other disciplines and their professions. Revised! Chapter 2 presents the Analysis Game, which teaches students to analyze an artifact, object or phenomenon by describing it in detail and wondering why it is as it is. Revised! Chapter 3 has a richer introduction to rhetorical thinking as the threshold The explanations of purpose, public and gender are now linked to explanations of closed and open prose and the rhetoric of online environments. The chapter also promotes deep learning, which helps students transfer the skills they learn in the classroom to other classes and future occupations. Revised! Chapter 5 focuses on non-verbal rhetoric. The persuasive power of document design, images and multimodal messages is now discussed in a single chapter. Revised! Part 2 has been simplified to facilitate navigation and includes many revisions per chapter. Revised! Chapter 6 includes expanded coverage of summary writing. New! A new Internet reading lags behind with student examples and a model essay replaces Michael Pollan's Why disturb? New! Chapter 9 includes new examples of informative articles for different purposes and audiences. New! Chapter 10 includes many new images and examples, including new fictional advertisements and advocacy posters on respect for under-represented cultures and environmentalism. New! The section on European Impressionist painting has been replaced by an analysis sample of the play Museum Security (Broadway Meltdown) by Haitian and Puerto Rican-American Jean-Michel Basquiat in 1983 and a painting, Reload (2007), by native-American artist Natalie Ball. Revised! Chapter 13 places greater emphasis on analysis in the synthesis process. New! Essays, images and examples updated by students appear throughout the text. New! The students' essays include an analysis of a surrealist painting by Dorothea Tanning; a strong summary/response essay examining Internet trolling; a requested information report on Planned Parenthood funding; another informative report on people's misconceptions about Islam and violence; a zine advocating for improved museum programs for children; an evaluation essay on PETA2's Facebook call to youth; and two new reflective pieces focusing on metacognition and rhetorical consciousness. Updated! Examples and visuals focus on current issues such as driverless cars, gun control, banned books, the refugee crisis in Europe, black lives Matter, prescription drug controversies, social media, climate change, and others. Revised! A revised introduction to research in Chapter 21 places greater emphasis on rhetorical reading and the goal of helping students understand research as a knowledge-building activity. Chapter 24 includes updated information on the format of MPs based on the 8th MLA Manual. Revised! Chapter 26 on Thoughtful Writing emphasizes metacognition and reinforces the importance of reflection for deep learning and knowledge transfer. Allyn and Bacon's Writing Guide, Brief, 8th Edition is also available through Revel™, an interactive learning environment that allows students to read, practice, practice, study in an ongoing experiment. Find out more. The following chapters have been revised: Part 1 is being reorganized. It also incorporates recent research on learning transfer, threshold concepts and metacognition to help learners apply comprehensive concepts to new rhetorical situations. Chapter 1 Posing Problems: The Requirements of Writing, Reading and Critical Thinking in Colleges provides students with an overview. It shows how the threshold concepts of problem-setting, knowledge-taking and rhetorical reading promote deep learning, which facilitates the transfer of skills from first-year composition to study of students from other disciplines and their professions. Chapter 2 presents the Analysis Game, which teaches students to analyze an artifact, object or phenomenon by describing it in detail and wondering why it is as it is. Chapter 3 has a richer introduction to rhetorical thinking as a threshold concept. The explanations of purpose, public and gender are now linked to explanations of closed and open prose and the rhetoric of online environments. The chapter also promotes deep learning, which helps students transfer the skills they learn in the classroom to other classes and future occupations. Chapter 5 focuses on non-verbal rhetoric. The persuasive power of document design, images and multimodal messages is now discussed in a single chapter. Part 2 has been simplified to facilitate navigation and includes many revisions per chapter. Chapter 6 includes expanded coverage of summary writing. A new Internet reading lags behind with student examples and a model essay replaces Michael Pollan's Why disturb? Chapter 9 includes new examples of informative articles for different purposes and audiences. Chapter 10 includes many new images and examples, including new fictional advertisements and advocacy posters on respect for under-represented cultures and environmentalism. The section on European Impressionist painting has been replaced by an analysis sample of the play Museum Security (Broadway Meltdown) by Haitian and Puerto Rican-American Jean-Michel Basquiat in 1983 and a painting, Reload (2007), by native-American artist Natalie Ball. Chapter 13 places greater emphasis on analysis in the synthesis process. Essays, images and examples updated by students appear throughout the text. The students' essays include an analysis of a surrealist painting by Dorothea Tanning; a strong summary/response essay examining Internet trolling; a requested information report on the Planned Parenthood; another informative report on people's misconceptions about Islam and violence; a zine advocating for improved museum programs for children; an evaluation essay on PETA2's Facebook call to youth; and two new reflective pieces focusing on metacognition and rhetorical consciousness. Examples and visuals focus on current issues such as driverless cars, gun control, banned books, europe's refugee crisis, Black Lives Matter, a prescription drug, prescription, social media, climate change, and others. A revised introduction to research in Chapter 21 places greater emphasis on rhetorical reading and the goal of helping students understand research as a knowledge-building activity. Chapter 24 includes updated information on the format of Members of Parliament based on the 8th edition of the MLA Manual. Chapter 26 on Thoughtful Writing emphasizes metacognition and reinforces the importance of reflection for deep learning and knowledge transfer. Part 1: Rhetoric for Writers 1. Posing Problems: The Requirements of Writing, Reading and Critical Thinking of Colleges 2. Exploring Problems: Making Claims 3. Think critically about rhetorical problems 4. How messages persuade 5. Think critically about document design, visual rhetoric and multimodal messages Part 2: Project Writing 6. Rhetoric reading: The writer as strong reader 7. Writing an autobiographical account 8. Writing an exploratory essay or annotated bibliography 9. Writing an essay or informative (and surprising) report 10. Image analysis 11. Writing a literary analysis essay to 12. Writing a scientific research report 13. Analysis and synthesis of ideas 14. Writing a classic argument 15. Make an evaluation 16. Propose a Part 3 solution: Composition and revision guide 17. Writing as problem-solving process 18. Strategies for the writing of closed-form prose to 19. Strategies for writing open-form prose 20. Strategies for Composing Multimodal Texts Part 4: Rhetoric Guide to Research 21. Asking questions, finding sources 22. Source assessment 23. Incorporating sources into your own writing 24. Source Quote and Documentation Part 5: Writing for Evaluation 25. Tests 26. Using Reflective Writing to Promote and Evaluate Learning What Every Student Should Know About Creating Sources with MPA Documentation, Update Edition What Every Student Should Know About Plagiarism Avoidance What every student should know about peer review practice what each student should know about creating portfolios The Pearson Key Editing Exercises Answer Key , 2nd Edition What every multilingual student should know about writing for college what every student should know about creating sources with APA documentation: Updated for APA Sixth Edition, 2nd Edition What every student should know about preparing effective oral presentations What every student should know about online research , 2nd edition Understanding Plagiarism paper format ISBN-13: 97801314443587 Suggested retail price $26.65 This article is not currently available for purchase on our websites. Instructors, you can always place orders with your bookstore. Displaying order information for Pearson offers affordable and accessible purchasing options to meet the needs of your students. Connect with us to find out more. K12 Educators: Contact your general manager of the Savvas Learning Company account for purchase options. Instant access ISBNs are taking them for them PayPal. Savvas Learning Company is a registered trademark of Savvas Learning Company LLC. Ramage, Bean and Johnson ©2018 Pearson 592 pp Ramage, Bean and Johnson ©2018 Pearson 592 pp Paper Format ISBN-13: 97801344424514 Suggested Retail Price $39.99 Availability